STATESMANSHIP.

Praise of Secretary Blaine's Brilliant Genius

BEHRING SEA AND RECIPROCITY

The Spanish Treaty Will Probably be Renegotiated by July 1 The Seal Agreement Avoids Present Trouble but Things not Settled

WASHINGTON, June 2. It is conceded by all parties that an agreement arrived at between the two governments will effectually put a stop to the seal fishery this season, and will remove all danger for a conflict on the subject of pending legislation. It will indicate an earnest purpose on the part of both Great Britain and the United States to arrive at an early settlement of the matter in dispute, but it is still an open question whether or not it will be at all possible to settle the terms of a final treaty.

The state department has not yet received a reply to Blaine's counter-suggestions for the provisions to be submitted to arbitration, and until a reply is received the department will remain in doubt as to the prospects of a speedy settlement of the dispute. It is understood that the question was discussed at the cabinet meeting this afternoon, but in the absence of information from Lord Salisbury it is very certain view of the situation cannot be had. The only information that the state department has on this subject is the announcement in the British parliament that Lord Salisbury was about to make a reply to Mr Blaine which would probably bring the two countries close together. If the suggestions made by Mr Blaine to be submitted to arbitration are accepted without change, arbitration will be had at once and the dispute will probably not even remain among the matters of live interest at the state department. It is the opinion of many, however, that Lord Salisbury will make changes in the form of the question to be presented, and yet the department officers are confident that the two countries can get together on the terms of arbitration.

The Spanish Treaty

WASHINGTON, June 2. Gen John W Foster, who has been conducting the recent negotiations between this and other countries for reciprocal relations, is in almost daily consultation with the president and officials of the state department about the publication of the proclamation that is to announce the terms on which the Spanish-American treaty will be put into effect. He declined to say whether or not this document will be forthcoming very soon, but it is generally the thought that in the absence of Secretary Blaine, who is not expected to return this summer, the president will not wait but will go ahead in the matter and that the proclamation will be out by the first of July. As a matter of fact, the case is so entirely in the hands of Secretary Foster that the presence in the city of Secretary Blaine, who exercises only a supervisory control over these reciprocity negotiations, is not at all necessary for the culmination of the agreement or even for the conduct of the business.

Two Per Cent. Bonds

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—The secretary of the treasury will issue a circular this afternoon notifying holders of outstanding 4 per cent. bonds that the existing rate of interest on these bonds will cease September next and that such bonds as are not redeemed on or before that date may be extended for an indefinite period with interest at 2 per cent. It is estimated that $[illegible] of these bonds are held by national banks to secure circulation and that $10,000,000 more are held in trust by banks and other institutions and that there will be no difficulty in exchanging this amount at a lower rate of interest. This will leave only $18,000,000 bonds to be redeemed in case the holders are not prepared to extend them. The question was considered at to-day's cabinet meeting and the precise form of the proposed notice was agreed upon as it will be issued this afternoon.

Changes in the Circulation.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The treasury department monthly statement of changes in the circulation during the month of May, which is out today, shows a net decrease in the circulation amounting to $25,028,724. There was an increase of $1,002,026 in silver treasury notes and $484,719 in subsidiary silver. On the other hand there was a decrease of $[illegible],460 in gold certificates, $7,982,062 in silver certificates, $2,915,647 in national bank notes, $2,360,720 in gold coin, $1,824,108 in standard silver dollars and $1,114,842 in United States notes. The total circulation of the country on June 1 is placed at $1,504,[illegible] against $1,432,126,651 on June 1, 1890, an increase during the twelve months of $[illegible].

Yale Commencement Orators.

NEW HAVEN, Conn, June 2.—Those who will speak for the De Forest medal at the commencement are Governor Attorly, of New York, "The French Protestants of the Sixteenth Century," Howard T Kingsbury, of New York, "Francois Villon," Edward N Lewis, Brooklyn, "The French Protestants of the Sixteenth Century," Herbert R Smith, Hartford, "Francois Villon," Luther H Taylor, Jr, Albany, N. Y., "The Pastoral Poetry of the Cyclian Greeks." The speaker for the Wayland prize will be Benjamin Harris, Fulton Mo., George A Kellogg, Lyme Centre, Conn, John Aaron Hooper, Yazoo City, Miss, Cowan S Shank, Canby, Ore, and W Miller, Richmond, Ky, and George L Hill, Stamford, Conn.

The Beecher Trial

NEW YORK, June 2.—The second day of the Beecher trial, otherwise the suit for damages brought by Sir William Gordon Cumming against Mr and Mrs. Lynett, Mr and Mrs. Arthur Wilson and Mr Henry Lovett for slander, commenced running at about 11 o clock with a repetition of the scenes with which the proceedings of the opening of the case were marked.

When the lord chief justice had given the jury the usual day's proceedings to begin, Mr Asquith stepped into the witness box and began to answer the questions of Sir Charles Russell. The latter began by reading a letter written by the plaintiff in answer to a letter addressed to him jointly by the Prince of Wales, Lord Coventry and Gen Williams. "This message was addressed to 'Dear Owen,' and in it he said that now he had had but little hope left to make life worth living, adding meantime I suppose I must try to live out my years."

In reply to the cross examining questions of Charles Russell, the plaintiff said that before the present legal proceedings began the Tranby Croft scandal had become public talk of conversation and commment because it had reached the clubs to which he belonged, the Turf club and the Marlborough club among others, and had taken action in the matter his clubs certainly have done so.

The plaintiff was excused from any further question and the Prince of Wales was called to the witness box. In substance the prince said: I have known the plaintiff for many years, have been his friend for the past ten years. He visited my house several times. Our intimacy continued until last June. I observed nothing suspicious in the plaintiff's play at Tranby Croft. I was [illegible] of the reports current in regard to Sir William Gordon Cumming" by Lord Coventry.

Continuing the Prince of Wales said the end event (the charge brought against Sir William Gordon Cumming) broke up the party at Tranby Croft. He, the prince, asked the document up put it in a packet, and sent it to his secretary. The document must be in the hands of the jury with the state of the game at the time it was last played. Mr and Mrs Lynett, Mr and Mrs Arthur Wilson and Mr. Berkeley Lovett.

The prince was then examined by Sir Charles Russell.

Having heard Sir William Gordon Cumming's statement that he was innocent, did you not feel it your duty to make further inquiries? asked Sir Charles.

No, answered the prince.

Have you not felt that you have connived at this?

It will be for others to decide.

At this stage Sir Edward Clarke, leading counsel for the plaintiff, interposed, remarking that the prince's testimony in the light of the evidence in court, was most important, and he asked the prince if he was not aware that Sir William had been induced to sign the document under the impression that he was only signing a document agreeing never to play cards again, was the only way out of the difficulty and if he did not do so, he would have to leave the house and would in addition be warned off every race course in England or elsewhere. This last piece of testimony caused another and more decided sensation in court. When Sir Charles Russell asked Mr. William why he continued to address the plaintiff as "Dear Bill" after the baccarat disclosure, the witness explained that the plaintiff was suffering from an army of mind and that he (the general) did not wish to add to his old friend's grief.

The witness at another part of the cross examination admitted that the plaintiff had requested Lord Coventry and himself for giving him (Sir William) what he termed "good advice."

Being re-examined by Sir William said he never recollected the bank at Tranby Croft as becoming unlimited. The play opened at fifty pounds and one hundred pounds. When he told Cummings that the evidence was overwhelming, he had heard nothing beyond the statement of Mr Greene, and he twenty acquiesced with the others.

General Williams' testimony ended the case for the plaintiff and the trial was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

American Home Missionary Society.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 2.—The American Home Missionary society, a national organization, met here in convention this morning. About 1000 delegates were present, representing nearly every state in the union. The officers of the society hold a preliminary meeting this morning to appoint committees.

This evening the annual sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr Wolcott of Newton, Mass. To-morrow morning at 9 o clock the first business is being will be held.

Suspected as a Spy.

BOSTON, June 2.—A Herald special from North Sydney, C. B., says great excitement prevails at St. Pierre over the continued presence of Hon James Fox, member of the legislature for St. Johns, N. F., who is regarded as a spy. Mr. Fox denied that he is there in any official capacity, but refuses to say why he remains. The governor has been asked to expel him, but this he refuses to do on account of the complications it may lead to.

Yale Students in Trouble

NEW HAVEN, Conn, June 2.—Twenty-five students were summoned by the Yale faculty to appear before them to-day and answer for their alleged misconduct during the Barnum circus parade yesterday, when they showered torpedoes upon the horses and elephants, thereby nearly causing a stampede among the animals. One of the professors saw the whole performance. The faculty regard it as a very serious matter and will probably punish the culprits.

The Czar is Obdurate.

LONDON June 2.—It is reported that the czar in responding to a personal appeal made by an exhalted person on behalf of the Hebrews in Russia said he was determined to continue his measures of Jewish expulsion. The Hebrews themselves, declared the czar, had forced this policy. There had never been a Nihilist plot hatched in which they were not concerned and they would actively engage in propagating subversive motives.

Important Physical Discovery

LONDON June 2.—General Stanley of South Carolina, announces that he has discovered the law of variation of the maximum tension of aqueous vapor, hitherto regarded as impossible of discovery. It would thus appear that after hundreds of years of search science has finally solved one of the most difficult problems of terrestrial physics and that we can now legislate fit control of the atmosphere and of the steam engine.

New York Murderers Sentenced

NEW YORK June 2.—Harris A Smiler James G Slowcum and Joseph Wood, all under conviction to suffer death for murder, but who had appealed to the federal courts, were resentenced by Judge Barrett in the supreme court general term today to be executed at Sing Sing during the week beginning July 6th, next.

Russian Plotters.

ST PETERSBURG, June 2.—The police of this city have searched 500 domiciles and made numerous arrests. It was discovered that the students' societies here have affiliated with those of Moscow, Kiew, Cazkop and Odessa, with the object of promoting a general uprising.

A Heavy Sentence.

LONDON, June 2.—From a dispatch received here it is learned that the Japanese policeman who attacked and wounded the czarowitz, while he was recently making a tour of Japan, has been sentenced to penal servitude for life.

THE OVERLAND PARK RACES

Meeting of the Rocky Mountain Sports men's Association The Epidemic Continues Worse Than Ever

DENVER June 2. [illegible] the second day of the spring meeting of the Overland park association was marked by the failure of the first race to come off promptly. The horses for the event had been at the post twice and had twice been sent back by the starter, the first time because Lady Lock had scored ahead of the field and the second time because Bob Ingersoll had broken his girth and had to be led back to the stand for a new saddle. The crowd was in a good humor over the delay, however, and when the bugle finally sounded the call to the post for the third time the grandstand was filled with a brilliant throng of men and women. The weather was perfect and the track was in fine condition. The field of horses for the first race, a mile and a sixteenth, was composed of Lady Lock, Bob Ingersoll, Mollie McCarthy, Dr Sheridan, Ed Corrigan and Lizzie Dwyer. The betting was lively, Lady Lock being the favorite at 100 to 60 against the field. The pool sellers were busy, however, and when the flag finally fell for a start Bob Ingersoll had a good lead of the field, with Lizzie Dwyer second, Lady Lock third and the others in a bunch. The positions of the horses at the first quarter were the same, but Lady Lock had begun to work her way through the field and was second at the half mile post, Bob Ingersoll being still in the lead. Lady Lock then began to gain on the leader and at the three quarter post she was neck and neck with Bob Ingersoll, the two being followed by the bunch. In the last eighth Lady Lock began to drop back and Bob Ingersoll came home a winner by a length, Lizzie Dwyer being second and Mollie McCarthy third. Time 1:58¾. The second race, a mile and a half, was won by Ed Corrigan's Dr Sheridan, Lizzie Dwyer being second and Bob Ingersoll third. Time 2:41¼. The third race, a mile and a quarter, was won by Lady Lock, Mollie McCarthy being second and Ed Corrigan third. Time 2:12¼. The fourth race, a mile and a half, was won by Ed Corrigan's Dr Sheridan, Bob Ingersoll being second and Lizzie Dwyer third. Time 2:41¼. The fifth race, a mile and a sixteenth, was won by Lady Lock, Dr Sheridan being second and Bob Ingersoll third. Time 1:49. The sixth race, a mile and a quarter, was won by Ed Corrigan's Dr Sheridan, Lizzie Dwyer being second and Bob Ingersoll third. Time 2:12¼. The seventh race, a mile and a half, was won by Lizzie Dwyer, Dr Sheridan being second and Bob Ingersoll third. Time 2:41¼. The betting was lively throughout the day and the pool sellers were busy. The pool room was crowded and it was generally conceded that the sport was the best ever seen at the park. The weather was fine and the attendance was large. The epidemic of horse sickness continues to prevail among the stables here and it is feared that it will be necessary to close the park for a week or more if the disease does not abate. The sickness is not of a fatal character, however, and no horses have died from it so far. The disease is a kind of a cold, affecting the lungs and causing the animals to cough and sneeze. It does not affect their appetites, however, and they are able to work and do so without any ill effects. The epidemic is said to be prevailing among the horses in all the stables in the city.

Colorado Principal Council.

DENVER, June 2.—There was a large gathering in St. John's Cathedral this morning at the opening of the Fifth Annual council of the Episcopal diocese of Colorado. To-day was devoted to the women's auxiliary to the board of missions and to-morrow the council proper will begin work.

Bishop G F. Seymour conducted the opening exercises this morning. He was assisted by Bishop Spaulding, Canon Lewis and Dr Williams. After the service Bishop Seymour delivered a sermon on the "Influence of Christ upon Human Society."

At 2 o clock the members of the auxiliary were addressed by Bishop Seymour, Miss Emery of New York the president of the auxiliary, followed with a short talk. The Rev A Bannister of Alamosa, the Rev O E. Austenson and Mr Harrington of Colorado City, spoke during the afternoon. Among the out-of-town delegates to the council were H R Pendery and John A. Maxwell, of Leadville, and Prof W M Rule, of Boulder.

To-morrow the day will be begun with holy communion and a sermon by Bishop Spaulding. A number of young men will be ordained and then the council will be organized.

Colorado at the World's Fair

BOSTON June 2.—The executive committee of the World's Fair commission met yesterday. A resolution was adopted which allows the Pueblo Mineral Palace the use of the mineral exhibit now in possession of the commission for their opening July 4th. The exhibit will remain at the Mineral Palace for an indefinite period. It was agreed to correspond with the commissioners of the various counties for the purpose of finding out just how much money will be appropriated by each county for the purpose of making an exhibit.

Keystone Bank Investigation

PHILADELPHIA June 2.—The city council committee investigating the methods of ex City Treasurer Bardsley met again this afternoon. C. B. Haines one of the directors of the suspended Keystone bank, admitted that there had been an over issue of stock of the Keystone bank. He said President Marsh informed him of the over-issue in February last. Witness had no knowledge of any over-drafts on the bank.

John Wanamaker had a line of discounts at one time and he thought that Mr Wanamaker had exceeded his discount privileges, but it was soon brought down to the limit. Wm. H Wanamaker had a line of discounts when the run was made on the bank. Since it has been cleared up. The Wanamaker discounts were regular and without collaterals.

Mr Stotesbery of Drexel & Co. testified that Bardley had been paid interest on deposits with his firm. Bank Examiner Drew stated that there were 315 shares of the so-called bogus stock. It was stock that should have been cancelled and is not technically over issued stock. It was issued in the name of John C. Lucas. None of it was ever in the name of John Wanamaker so far as he could recollect.

Confederate Reunion.

JACKSON, Miss., June 2.—The United Confederate veterans are here in full force. Almost every house is handsomely decorated with national and Confederate colors. The People's party [illegible] Denver. It has eight mountains. Of course a state and national ticket is in order.

Colorado Springs has to build a new jail because the present one is unhealthy to keep prisoners in. Denver will not have similar trouble. Eighteen prisoners have escaped from her jail in twenty months.

New York state is making a great fight and expending thousands of dollars to restore the forests of the Adirondack region, and to prevent further inroads by selfish corporations and individuals. It is easy to see now how much better and cheaper it would have been if in the early days this land been reserved from settlement. But then there was apparently not even as much interest in forest preservation as there now is in Colorado.

It is said that there [illegible] in the English court yesterday when a jury man dared to ask the Prince of Wales a couple of questions. The fact that it did cause a sensation illustrates the hold which aristocratic traditions still have upon England. In this case the juror was a representative of the law, the prince was there for the purpose of giving information, and it was a sensible thing for the juror to ask what he wanted to know.

The proper place for such men as Schweinfurth, the prophet of a new religion who blasphemously calls himself "the Christ," is the insane asylum. Within bounds every man's religion should be as free as his thought. But a person's thoughts may take such a turn that he becomes an object of danger or disgust to his neighbors, and then it is time for the law to interfere. So religion should never be interfered with so long as it does not operate against law or public morality. This Schweinfurth (the first syllable is suggestive), is either a deliberate or an unconscious impostor, he is either a lunatic or a swindler. In either case an insane asylum might bring him to his senses.

We call attention to a communication from Captain De Courcey in regard to the supply of water in the city ditches. It is very evident that the ditches should be, by this time of the year, in good condition and the water already running in them. It is indisputable that if the ground is thoroughly soaked now it will need much less water than later on. It must also be remembered that the cottonwoods are trees that naturally grow in damp places and require much water, and while they stand the drouth much better than other kinds, they cannot be safely neglected. There are more dead trees in the city this spring than ever before, unquestionably the result of last summer's water famine, and another such a trial would be very likely to cause much more very serious damage.

AERIAL WARFARE.

Mr. Hiram S. Maxim the inventor of the Maxim gun, the wonderful automatic machine which fires a thousand shots by the force of the recoil of the cartridge, has been experimenting with aerial navigation. Mr. Maxim is entitled to respect and claims to be building a machine which there is a probability will be able to carry 1400 pounds in addition to its own weight. Mr Maxim, whose ideas naturally run to war, suggests that the cargo should consist of a man and dynamite. He says truthfully

"The whole world becomes changed if it works the whole world will be revolutionized in a year. There will be no more gun shields no more armor plates, no more big guns, no more fortifications, no more armies. There will be no way of guarding against what this machine will do. It will drop a ton of nitro-glycerine into a place and you can't stop it. It will go into an enemy's country and drop dynamite on the gas works, the water works and the bridges. Those are the things to destroy. Instead of Tommy Atkins going ahead, musket in hand, and standing the brunt of the fighting the big fellows who get up the wars will have to suffer. The first thing we will do will be to fly over the emperor's palace and drop a ton of dynamite on the roof. What will it do? Why, a Russian officer said to me when I explained the thing to him 'That will change the whole world in six months.'"

The Restriction of Immigration

Harper's Weekly

Public feeling in regard to stringent regulation of the immigration and naturalization of foreigners in this country is more seriously aroused than for many years. The Native American excitement of forty years ago was due to a perception of tendencies which are now confirmed. But in fact it was a combination of secretary, sectarianism and politics, which like a whirlwind blew violently, but soon spent its force. The results of illegitimate immigration and political enfranchisement were foreseen but they were then theoretical. The time that has elapsed however, has brought us face to face with actual perils. The volume of immigration has increased while its quality rapidly decreases. The population of the country is largely heterogeneous while loosing nearly the condition of great national power. The strength that lies in common traditions a common history and language in general intelligence and local prejudices is constantly diminished by the flood of the least intelligent and desirable population of other countries which pours constantly upon us. This country is the guardian and illustration and as we believe and intend the conclusive demonstration of the stability and efficiency of popular government as the safeguard of liberty under law. Our first duty is to maintain the conditions under which that demonstration is practicable. To permit the wild life and breed of lawlessness, ignorance, corruption and lawlessness would be to betray our trust. The question is not of excluding foreigners, but of saving the life from foreign element. A state or a country may be imperilled by over-immigration like the human body by over-feeding.

LITERARY NOTES.

Captain Charles King, U. S. A., will contribute to Harper's Young People for June 2, a stirring story of adventure and Indian warfare entitled "Sergeant Pepo." Howard Pyle's entertaining romance, "Men of Iron," the interest of which has been constantly increasing from week to week, begins to approach a climax, and is probably near its conclusion. Few such charming stories of the Middle Ages have been written within recent years, and those who have been so happy as to follow the fortunes of the "men of iron" thus far will be sorry to part company with them.

The career of no other person in the present century has been more varied and more extraordinary than that of Lucien Napoleon Bonaparte. He was by turns a barrister, an adventurer, a diplomat, the private secretary to Lord Byron, a brilliant favorite of society, a religious director, an ex-drifter in an obscure western village, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, a bank stockbroker, the projector of a gigantic colonization scheme in Palestine, a visionary religious teacher—but through all these phases of his life he was a man so brilliant in intellect and so earnestly devoted to his conception of duty that even those who most deplored his eccentricities were compelled to admire his honesty and integrity. There are many people in New York and Washington who remember with pleasure his charming, courteous and captivating manner, and who, from personal acquaintance with him regard him as one of the most remarkable characters of our times. The memoir of his life by his kinswoman and intimate friend, Mrs. Margaret Oliphant, which has just been published in two handsome volumes by Harper & Brothers, is the most interesting biography written since Boswell's Johnson.

The subjects that have had the greatest share of attention from thoughtful men for the past month have undoubtedly been immigration, our currency, the case of the Rev Dr Briggs, and the international copyright law, which will go into effect July 1. The June number of The Forum contains discussions of all these subjects.

Give Us Ditch Water Quickly!

COLORADO SPRINGS, June 2, 1891

To the Editor of the GAZETTE:

In reading the report of the council proceedings last night it seems to me that members exerted themselves to demonstrate the best way not to get water into our city ditches. The committee to whom a previous meeting entrusted the duty of fixing the ditch so that water would run through it, contented itself with reporting that, owing to some little difference of opinion, or imaginary impediment, it had done nothing to the ditch, which, therefore, remained in an unserviceable and useless condition, and the council contented itself with relegating this important matter back to the same committee, delighted, apparently, to get the business off its hands until the next meeting night, at all events. I certainly felt the impression, from reading the reporter's account of last night's meeting, that the members of the council do not understand the importance of this ditch water business, and that none of them feel a real earnest desire to take hold of the matter and fix it so that as many as have water running by the side of our city trees. The trees need water right now. Every succeeding day they will need it more and more, and more and more of it, and the longer we defer getting it the harder it will be to get it from the farmers down the Fountain. Just at present the farmers are cutting their first crop of alfalfa and do not compete with the city for its ditch water. Now, therefore, right now, today, is the time for us to be running our city ditches full to the brim with water and soaking our trees thoroughly. In a week or ten days, or two weeks, and right along thereafter, the farmers will be wanting all the water in the Fountain, and then our trees will suffer for the need of it. The rains we have had have been as a drop in the bucket to the great desert and of our trees. At this season they need all the water they can possibly get. As sure as they are to-day suffering for want of water if our people go on in their present dilatory carelessness, don't care not of way, many of our trees will receive their death blow. If our council members would exert themselves more to show how things can be done rather than in fritting away the time in demonstrating how and why they cannot be done, and if, instead of putting impediments in the way of those who wish to accomplish something, they would at least keep quiet when they have nothing to recommend in the way of helpful aid, their constituents would be grateful and the city's interests would be benefited. At present nearly everybody seems to see the danger of this criminally careless way of trifling with the ditch water question, excepting the members of the council who have the city's welfare in their care. Of course there are honorable exceptions, but they are so few that the rule is proved conclusively. It is very hard for an old citizen, who has watched, with anxious solicitude, the growth of every tree along our city ditches, to remain quiet while the lives he loves are carelessly jeopardized hence I give expression to feelings which are shared by many hundreds of our people equally solicitous as is

Yours truly,

M. L. DE COURCEY.

The Koch Lymph

The following is a verbatim report of Professor Virchow's remarks upon the koch lymph in the recent debate on the sanitary budget in the Prussian house of deputies. After saying that it was premature to speak of the remedy as a dangerous poison he continued: "It would also be going too far to say at this time that all the bodies built upon it have been annihilated. Still to speak strictly, there has not been a single case proved of tuberculosis having been cured by the remedy. All statements to the contrary are ill founded. Moreover, the application of the remedy is attended by numerous dangers though it would be wrong to regard any physician who wishes to use it as administering poison or as a murderer. My statements written at the beginning of January however, still hold good. The first hopes have not been fulfilled, but I do not feel called upon to predict (soon) what the remedy may become in the future. Experience will show. The matter has been managed with very great overhaste but I will not inquire whether Herr von Gossler or anybody else was to blame. As long as Dr Koch was regarded as omniscient the belief in the supremacy of the institute to be built for his purposes over the Charité was perhaps justifiable."

WOODLAND PARK, June 1

Another sudden death occurred in Woodland Park this morning. Robbie the 6 year old son of James Baldwin one of our merchants was taken sick yesterday with a bad attack of bowel trouble and grew worse so rapidly that Dr Eggleman of Green Mountain Falls was sent for in the night but before he could arrive the little fellow had breathed his last.

Secretary of State E. J. Eaton and Assessor Perkins were at the Park today, the former to look over his ranch north of town.

W. F. Boyce of the Springs the contractor for the plastering and mason work on the new hotel here has left for parts unknown and several parties claim they are losers in amounts from $20 to $[illegible].

The Men of Athens Led on by Miltiades Quickly Put a Persian Host to Rout and Founded the Glory of Greece—Marathon Saved European Civilization

(Copyright 1891 by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)

MARATHON, placed at the head of the great decisive battles of the world because it settled the question whether Persian civilization should be dominated by and assimilated from the east or from the west, from the seat of firmly rooted despotism and superstition, or from the free, lively, progressive, fresh, inquiring, creative minds of Greek and Roman culture. It was the battle for all the Greeks, called their sons to battle for a victory whose fruits have passed in a pure and unmixed inheritance to all the generations of the world.

First buried beneath the fruit of Hellas's sod

As on the morn to distant glory dear
When Marathon becomes a name to wear
Which uttered to the listening age of war
The cry, the last, the full, the conquering cry
The flying Mede, his shaftless, broken bow
The fainting Greek, her spear in splinters.

From Marathon also dated a new departure in the conflict of warfare since of course a field so surprising in its results had its genius and its hero for the emulation of men who should come after. And this was Miltiades, a citizen of Athens who had been in the service of Darius the Mede and had sharpened his wits as a soldier of fortune in some of the conquered colonies where he was a satrap of the Persian king. The Athenians forgave him grave sins and elected him one of the ten generals of their army, when he returned to them with a price upon his head for an act of daring treachery to Darius.

The Persian army set out in the year 490 B. C. to punish Athens for having assisted Ionia in its rebellion against Asiatic usurpation and tyranny, and having conquered the neighboring Eubœa and razed its city, Eretria, as an example of what would befall Athens, they landed on the plain of Marathon with over 100,000 men, intending to march upon Athens. The Athenians went out to meet them 10,000 strong, summoning their neighbors to lend a hand. The Spartans promised to do so, but religious scruples detained them, and the Plataeans sent 1,000 men to repay a similar service rendered some years before.

When the Athenian generals saw Darius' host before them, and beheld their own weak muster a division of opinion showed itself at once. The Persian troops up to this date had proved invincible in every contest waged against the Greeks, and the very name of Mede sent terror to the souls of the bravest son of Hellas. The Athenians however had immense advantages in spite of their weak battalions and five generals out of ten voted for an immediate battle. The Persians had landed on a low plain but slightly elevated from the beach, and the Greeks were upon a height that encircled the plain nearly from shore to shore. At the extremities of the beach were marshes which at the season—autumn—were impassable for troops. Five of the generals asserted that, as the Persians had come to fight, they should be allowed to take the initiative and butt their heads against the Athenian spears that would await them at every turn. Besides since the Spartans were coming up to aid their fellows, it would be best to postpone action until their arrival at least.

On the other hand, five colleagues voted for immediate attack on the Persian camp. Miltiades headed this party and founded his opinion on his knowledge of the Persian troops, whom he deemed inferior to Greeks when the latter were well handled, and his belief in the uncertainty of human affairs no matter how [illegible] colored they might appear. Athens was twenty two miles distant from Marathon and there safely hidden while better men were on the warpath, were fictious of selection, men ready to betray the state into the hands of Darius for their own ends. An expelled tyrant of Athens, Hippias was in the Persian camp instigating the warfare on his people in the hope of being reinstated as a satrap of the conqueror. Of course he had tools at work in Athens and hence Miltiades believed that what might be gained by delay in the field would be lost in giving time for plotters to get up a fire in the rear.

The ten generals were evenly divided and in such emergencies the war ruler had the deciding vote. That office was filled by an Athenian noble Callimachus who was listening greatly to the discussion of the generals. Miltiades appealed to him with some what blunt but forcible eloquence to vote for an offensive policy. It is in your power with you Callimachus, he said, either to enslave Athens or by assuring her freedom to win for yourself immortality of fame such as not even Harmodius and Aristogeiton have acquired for never since the Athenians were a people were they in such danger as they are at this moment. If they bow the knee to these Medes they are to be given up to Hippias and you know what they then will have to suffer. But if Athens comes victorious out of this contest she has it in her to become the first city of Greece. Your vote is to decide whether we are to join battle or not. If we do not then our enemies will disunite the Ionians and the city will be betrayed to the Medes. But if we fight before there is outbreak among the states of Athens I believe that if the gods will only fairly award victory we are able to get the best of the engagement.

Callimachus was with the eleventh generals elect. Miltiades chief of the campaign and elected to fight.

The Persians in fact were doing nothing except urging on Hippias in his schemes of fomenting trouble in the backs of the Greeks. Miltiades counted upon the superiority of his men and arms of the Greeks and upon their patriotic enthusiasm. The situation demanded battle at once. The longer the time was allowed where the Persians lay fresh and in safety the more it would be in their favor. But the fate of Marathon was to be decided to call for an extended battle. The Persians concentrated their forces in the wings and were in the center. The formation of the Greeks was just the reverse of the Persians with their strong center and light wings. But the Greeks were heavily equipped, bearing spears, helmets, breast plates, shields, greaves and short swords.

WARRIORS OF KING DARIUS

The Persians had no armor and only wicker shields, with short lances and cimeters for weapons. The shock of the first attack broke down the front line of Persians, but they rallied and got up to work to retrieve, individually and by weight of numbers, what they had lost in the surprise. The best Persian troops were in the center and they succeeded in not only repulsing the Greek center but in driving it back across the plain up a valley that divided the mountain side. The Greek wings, however had been successful and had routed everything opposed to them. This was the turning point and the faith of Miltiades in the organization of his soldiery was justified.

In ninety nine cases out of a hundred victorious soldiers rush wildly in pursuit and go too far. Such a mistake at Marathon would have changed the history of the world. But the Greeks in both flanks maintained perfect coolness, and when the work cut out for them was done, wheeled and united and Miltiades placed himself at their head and led them upon the victorious Persian center. The discomfited Greek center, seeing this, rallied and renewed the fight. The compact formation was the one for the new emergency, and Greek discipline enabled Miltiades to vary his tactics in the heat of action.

The solid ranks of the united columns of the Greeks and their heavy armor and superior equipment for fighting at close quarters defeated every effort of the Asiatics, and finally the whole Persian host was in rout. And at this time, the proper moment, the spirit of courage that had come upon the Greeks by reason of their successful ideas was given full play and they pursued the shattered masses to the water's edge, and cut them down in the ships drawn upon the beach for embarkation. Many ships were boarded and fired, and the Asiatics who had the temerity to offer resistance were drowned or slaughtered. The Greek loss was mainly sustained on the beach. Callimachus fell there, and also one of the ten generals. Seven Persian galleys were burned, and the rest quickly pushed off, bearing away a vast army, so far as numbers went, despite the enormous loss in battle.

But Miltiades work was not ended. Athens was still exposed to treachery, and to the craft of Darius' able general Datis. Hippias had been killed in the battle, but his emissaries might unwittingly betray the scantily garrisoned city to the Persians if summoned to do so while the Athenian army was at a distance. The hero of Marathon did not sit down on his laurels, but left a guard over the fabulous spoils of the field, and before daylight on the morning after the battle mustered his weary soldiers on the heights above the city, where, to the amazement of the Persian leader, they lay in full view of his fleet as it entered the harbor of Athens after a rapid night sail.

The victory was complete. The Persians withdrew, and the moral effect was such that Grecian courage never qualified and never yielded before the monster hordes of the Orient.

The Persian dead on the field were over six thousand and great numbers were drowned in the sea or burned in the ships. The Athenian dead, numbering only 192, were exceptionally honored by interment upon the battlefield, where a mound was raised over their bones, and ten columns were erected to commemorate the fallen of the ten tribes which took part in the battle. The Spartan reenforcements to the number of 2,000 made a forced march of 150 miles in three days, but were too late to share in the glory. The tactics of Miltiades at Marathon have been a study for military men ever since. Had he adhered to Grecian custom and spread his men in a uniform line they would not have been able to strike a telling blow at any given point and could have been broken with ease. Had he sent them in at a slow pace the Persians would have had time to form and offer stout resistance. The formation in heavy wings and a weak center was better than a strong center and light wings, because the center, even though successful could have been flanked by the Persians with their ample forces and the favorable open ground on either side. Yet for all this it was the steadiness of the Greek wings in stopping the pursuit at the proper time and in re-forming to assail the Persian center that carried the day.

The Persian cavalry, believed to have been 10,000 strong, seems not to have put in a blow, although the Persians selected the plains of Marathon as a spot especially adapted for this arm of service of which the Greeks had none.

"It won't do," sobbed out Lafontaine. "I am only at the first volume."—Universum.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR BARGAINS?
Read the Following:

At the southwest corner of Huerfano and Nevada Ave. we have a choice business property, 95 feet on Huerfano and 125 feet on Nevada, that can now be bought at a very reasonable figure. As a business property and one that is sure to bring large returns in the near future, there is no better location for the amount invested than to buy this corner at the price asked.

On North Tejon street we have an 8 room house, bath, hot and cold water, hot air furnace, two mantels and grates, electric lights, two hydrants in yard, good barn and well arranged, fine lawn and trees. The price of this valuable property is only $5000.

On Grant avenue, in West Colorado Springs, lot 50x150, new house of 6 rooms, fine lawn, nicely located for a home, easy terms. Call soon, as this place will sell quickly.

Also, at the southeast corner of Moreno and Cascade, lot 75x190 feet, an 8 room brick house, cellar, stable, very fine lawn, shrubbery and fruit trees, a good location for a boarding house or hotel. This is cheap at $5700.

Don't forget this lot, 84x240, with stone building 40x100, close to A. T. & S. F. tracks. Somebody will get a bargain, as it will surely be needed for warehouse purposes. The price is $3800, $1000 cash, balance easy payments, 8 per cent interest.

Here is a bargain sure. Lot 50x100 feet, next to corner of Uintah and Weber, worth more money now than we are asking $2100.

On South Tejon street car line, lot 50x140, with 4 room house, lot worth the money asked $1600 $300 cash, balance $25 per month, interest at 8 per cent per annum.

Lots in Ivywild are selling well, considering the times. You had better get one before the best are gone. The best of terms to the building.

NEWS BY RPL&NEWSCO

Some of the Testimony in the Forgery Trial of Clark Hatch

A great many persons in this vicinity have no doubt been interested in the result of the trial of Clark Hatch at Worcester, Mass. The fact that he had been acquitted was telegraphed over the country, but nothing was given concerning the evidence. Eastern papers have been received in this city giving the evidence in the trial and we give extracts showing some of the evidence for the defense. The story of the forgery for which Mr. Hatch was tried is too well known to need give the evidence for the prosecution. The following is from the Boston Herald:

Colonel Hopkins opened to the jury. He said: "If the witness used by the witness for the state could be relied upon, there would be little or no question at this trial. Clark W. Hatch is here ready to prove that he is not the person who went to the Mechanics' bank and deposited the $2000 check. We come here knowing that the defendant is wrongfully prosecuted, and all the findings by which to rebut the charges will be given to you."

The colonel then proceeded to detail what he was prepared to show in regard to the evidence required to establish an alibi in defense of the Hatch forgery prosecuted.

Colonel next took up the question of personal identity, and urged that it was one of the most difficult things in the whole history of jurisprudence to establish the identity of a man; that is, to get a witness to say: "I saw that man do it."

"The defense has no means of showing," said the colonel, "that the claim of the death of Harry C. Smith was not a fraud upon the company. There is no question that the check for $2,000 is genuine, and that it was paid, but we have no proof to show that it was in some way connected with a fraudulent transaction."

"The defense is prepared to show that there was such a person as Clark Wells doing a brokerage business in Boston, and that Mr. Hatch had dealings with him. From the moment of Hatch's arrest in the Union station there had been no change in his appearance, and he has done nothing that could be construed to indicate fear to meet the charges against him."

The colonel then explained the meaning of the term alibi, and contended that it was the most honest, most complete and best means to establish the innocence of a prisoner in a case similar to the one under consideration.

On August 21, last year, Mr. Hatch was in Boston and remained there during that day. It was the time of the Grand Army reunion. Now Mr. Hatch was lying in jail, and had no means of accounting for himself on that particular day, when the matter came up for dispute, but since that time circumstances have come to light showing that Hatch, instead of being in Worcester, was, in fact, nowhere in its vicinity. Mrs. Hawks, of Boston, who is connected with the Grand Army Relief Corps, is ready to say that she saw Mr. Hatch in Kilby street on the date in question.

Colonel Hopkins recited at length other points that the defense proposed to bring out, showing that there had been a grievous error made by the state's witnesses, when they swore to seeing Hatch at the Mechanics' bank.

Those gentlemen are entirely mistaken in the question of identity, said the colonel. We will account for Mr. Hatch's movements on the 25th, during both the morning and afternoon.

The first witness called by the colonel was the defendant, Clark W. Hatch, who testified that he was 44 years old and was born in Madison county, N. Y. He had been an agent of the Travelers' Insurance company in partnership with Mr. Woodman.

Question. Where were you in August, 1890? Answer. In Boston most of the time. I went to Denver in September.

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Hatch? A. Clark W. Hatch.

Q. What does the "W" stand for? A. Nothing; simply "W."

Witness was shown the Smith application for insurance, which he said was obtained from a gentleman whom he met on a train, a stranger. After forming his acquaintance, witness suggested that he take out a policy, which he concluded to do. He came to the office the next day, where the policy was written. He had never seen the man from that day. All the letters connected with death are attached to the claim papers, and sent to the main office.

Q. Did you ever know a man by the name of Clark Wells? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. In Boston. I have met him in various places, the Masonic Temple for one.

Q. Did you have some transaction with him relating to this check? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you on the 14th day of August? A. In Boston.

Q. Where were you on the 25th? A. In Boston.

Q. Where were you on the 28th? A. I think I was in Boston most of the time.

The witness then recalled the fact that a Mrs. McKee had called at his office on Aug. 14, when she paid him $100 in liquidation of a claim against her husband.

On the 25th, witness said, Mrs. Hawks and Mrs. Sampson were in his company. Mrs. Hawks was one of the most confidential acquaintance of the witness, as confidential as a member of his own family. He became acquainted with Mrs. Sampson at the wedding of Mr. Hawks. He saw these two ladies on the morning of the 25th. They had just returned from Old Orchard. He was living in Newton at the time, and his wife was in Michigan, visiting friends. It was understood that when the ladies arrived in Boston, the witness and Mrs. Woodman were to be satisfied by them. They went to the Adams house, and arrangements were made for their entertainment. They were in his office during the morning, and in the afternoon a trip to Nantasket was made by the ladies and the witness.

Another incident of the 25th was the sending of $25 to Special Agent Jenks.

In the evening the party went to the Boston museum.

On Saturday the ladies went to Brookfield. They were in the office every morning during their stay for their letters.

"On another evening," said the witness, "Mr. Woodman and I went to the ladies' room and spent the evening. I think it was Thursday evening."

Witness said that Wells had been in his office for the purpose of negotiating a loan. Witness sold him one for $500, receiving in payment a check on the Mechanics' bank, but it came back protested, and with no payment out of his own pocket.

The following is from the Worcester Daily Spy of May 20 1891:

Mrs. Malinda McKee continued her testimony at the opening of the Hatch trial in the superior court yesterday. She said the defendant had loaned her $400, and held her note for it. She swore that she saw Hatch in the Boston office, Thursday, August 14, between 1 and 2 o'clock. She remembered the time, because she walked afterward to the Old Colony station and looked at her watch before starting. She accounted for her movements that day with remarkable exactness in the details. She went to Hatch's office about 12:30. Witness had to wait for Hatch. She called in reference to a note given to Hatch, and also to see about her brother's policy. She also wanted an extension of time on the note. Bills of purchase of various articles, bought August 25 in Boston, were produced and identified by witness. Witness told her friends about her transaction with Hatch shortly after his arrest. The cross-examination of Mrs. McKee by the defense in this case was with W. S. Slocum, Esq., of Boston, the legal representative of Mrs. C. W. Hatch.

John A. McKee, husband of the preceding witness, said he had been a letter carrier in Boston twenty-five years. He knew Hatch, and had to do with the business transactions between Mrs. McKee and Hatch. Witness is a member of the Grand Army. He attended Boston during Worcester week, Aug. 14. He was with a party of Major Cooper, another G. A. R. man. He saw Mrs. McKee on Kilby street entering Hatch & Woodman's office at 12:30, Aug. 14.

Mrs. Helen L. Hawks, of Omaha, said she used to be Helen L. Barnes of North Brookfield. She was the daughter of Harrison Barnes. She was married in June, 1883. Her husband, W. I. Hawks, has always been in the insurance business. Witness has known Hatch some years. She saw him a year before her marriage. She went to Omaha in the spring of 1889 with her husband, who was in the employ of the company. Mr. Hawks left that work for Hatch after his marriage. She is acquainted with Miss Sampson.

While in Chicago last fall she visited at West Brookfield every summer. She is in the habit of seeing Miss Sampson. She came east June 20, 1890. She returned to Omaha September 5. Hatch was a close friend of her husband's. She saw Hatch July 25. She always received her letters from him in Boston at the Boston office.

"Did you speak of it as the office?" "You mean Mr. Hatch's office, I suppose?"

"Certainly."

Witness is well acquainted with Mr. Wood[illegible] 1879. She left West Brookfield for Boston August 21. She was at Old Orchard Sunday. She breakfasted at the Adams House August 25 and left at 9 o'clock. She went soon after to Hatch's office, which she found closely locked. He (Hatch) explained the arrangements made in the office for speaking in a few days in Boston. Woodman was in and out of Hatch's office. Witness received and wrote letters in the office, one of the letters being to her mother. She took out her watch and compared it with a clock. It was 12:30. She left the office shortly after. Both Mr. Hatch and Mr. Woodman were to wait at the Kilby street office for the ladies to return from Nantasket. They dined at Young's, and afterwards went to the Museum. The play bill was shown in court and identified, and so were programmes of the Nantasket concert. She was in Boston during the week. She boarded at No. 11 Beacon street during the week, in company with Mr. Sampson. Witness first knew of Hatch's arrest from reading the Omaha paper, the Monday following it.

Cross-examined, witness said that she received a letter from Hatch about Feb. 15. She first saw him, since his arrest, in the court room, Tuesday. She came east last two weeks ago, reaching North Brookfield Tuesday. She came to Worcester the next day, returning to North Brookfield in the evening. She has been in Worcester since Monday. She stayed at the Fiske house in Portland.

Hatch did not go out of the office while the ladies were in it, Aug. 25. They reached the Adams house between 12 and 1 o'clock. Mr. Clucas was in the office Aug. 25.

William A. Mouse of Martha's Vineyard, an attorney-at-law, testified. He has known Mr. Hatch five years. He has seen a person in Boston about two years ago who strongly resembled Mr. Hatch. Objection was raised to the admission of this testimony, and the point was argued. The evidence was excluded.

T. E. Marham, an insurance solicitor for Hatch & Woodman, proved a lively witness. He has been in business about four years. He has known Hatch a long time. He saw Hatch Aug. 25.

Miss Louise Sampson of North Brookfield, a prepossessing young woman, testified: She lived with Rev. Leander Chamberlain of Brooklyn, while keeping a private boarding school there. She was a friend of Mrs. Hawks. She was in Boston, August 25, and at Mr. Hatch's office. She substantiated the story of Mrs. Hawks. While in the office she wrote a letter to her brother, who was ill at Brewsters, New York. She also wrote a letter to her mother.

Resuming her direct testimony, Miss Sampson stated that she wrote two letters, one to her brother and a second to her mother, shorter, in Hatch's office, August 25. Witness wrote her letters after Mrs. Hawks wrote hers. Mrs. Hawks soon after remarked it was 11.30 and they must leave at once. At Jordan, Marsh & Co's store each made a purchase on the first floor. They were at the store not longer than ten minutes. They next went to the Adams house, where they sent in their cards to the clerk. The trunks had been sent to the Adams house. Some little change in dress was made and they left later for Nantasket by the 1.30 boat. They came back by the 4.15 boat and went directly to the office (Hatch's) where both Mr. Hatch and Mr. Woodman were found. A telegram came to Hatch while witness was there, and he gave Mr. Woodman some money in bills. Mr. Woodman went out with this money and returned later. Witness went to the Museum with Mrs. Hawks, Mr. Hatch and Mr. Woodman. At 12 o'clock Wednesday went to Beacon street, where she stayed with Mrs. Hawks the rest of the week. She remembered what she did the following day, Tuesday. Mr. Hatch invited Mrs. Hawks to dinner, as witness was going to College Hill.

Witness remembered what happened on Wednesday and the following days and gave the circumstances in detail, in a clear and truthful manner. Witness had known both Mr. Hatch and Mr. Woodman since 1883, at the time of the Hawks wedding. She has seen considerable of both gentlemen since that. Witness saw Hatch at his office on other days of the week than Monday.

Cross-examined: Miss Sampson said she registered at the Fiske House at Old Orchard. She saw Hatch on Monday forenoon, August 25, as soon as she entered the office. She was just told she would be called as a witness in this case in April, while living at Brooklyn. She went to Brewsters, N. Y., where her brother was ill, during August. Later Hatch was at the office on Saturday and witness saw him at Beacon street later. She arrived at West Brookfield last Friday.

Albert S. Southworth of Boston, an expert in handwriting, testified that there was nothing in the "Mamie E. Smith" of the forged check and the insurance application to justify him, in an important matter, in saying that the same hand wrote them. They might or might not have been written by the same person.

[Hatch testified that he filled out the application blank for the Harry C. Smith policy.]

Albert H. Inman, another expert, of Worcester, said he saw nothing in the two "Mamie E. Smiths" to indicate that they were written by the same person."

Here the defense rested its case.

The following is a special telegram from Worcester to The Boston Daily Advertiser of May 26:

C. W. Hatch was a free man for a few moments this morning. The jury before which he was tried on the charge of presenting a forged check brought in a sealed verdict of acquittal Saturday, which was read. Clerk Harlow ordered the prisoner's discharge. However this was not to be the case, for Colonel Drennan served a "mesne" process for debt on Mr. Hatch before he left the court room. This was issued at the instance of the Travelers' Insurance company, who seem to be acting against Hatch as far as they can. The amount is $2,000, which it is claimed Hatch owes them.

This is a civil process, and is served because it was thought that Hatch would immediately leave the state. If he can satisfy the court that such is not the case he will be released on his own recognizance.

A writ of habeas corpus was filed by his counsel, alleging false arrest and imprisonment, and dwelling on the point that the debts for which he was arrested are unfounded, and that Hatch was taken before he had a chance, after his acquittal, to leave the dock or go to his home. This writ was granted this afternoon, and a writ of protection was issued, under which Hatch cannot be arrested within the state lines on a civil process, or until he has a reasonable time to reach his home in Colorado Springs.

It is a question where Hatch's home is. He was tried as Charles W. Hatch of Boston. He called himself Clark W. Hatch of Colorado Springs. He took dinner at the Bay State house yesterday, registering as Clark W. Hatch of Topeka, Kans. Judge Mason, who released him, was angry that a prisoner should have been arrested before leaving the dock. Soon after he was seen driving north with Mr. Merham, the principal witness in his case. Where he has gone no one knows. His friends say he has gone away for his health for a few days. The expenses in this suit are large. It is claimed that Hatch spent $10,000 in his trial for the murder of his latest uncle, and the costs in this will not be much less.

The protection of the court will not avail Mr. Hatch much. He is sued in the Hatch case completely by attack the Travelers' Insurance company, and as soon as it was announced Dr. W. D. Lewis went to Boston and swore out a warrant in the municipal court against Hatch. He returned with a warrant for Hatch's arrest for the forgery of the checks, one payable to Robert P. Gannett, administrator, for $2000, and the other payable to Robert P. Gannett for $2000. Hatch cashed these checks in person at the Mount's National bank in Boston, the first Dec. 31, 1888, and the second Jan. 15, of the same year. Dr. Lewis tells the story of how Hatch is alleged to have assumed the name of Charles A. Gannett and taken six policies with the Travelers' company at a small New Jersey agency in the summer of 1888. The policies were sent at his order to New Hampshire late in the year. Hatch then, it is alleged, under the name of Robert P. Gannett, took letters of administration on the estate of Charles A. Gannett in the Mad River county probate court and filed the bonds, with his brother as one of the sureties. He then, it is alleged by Dr. Lewis, forged death proofs and filled the administrator's bond with six false names. Charles A. Gannett, like the fingers Harry C. Smith, was a traveling salesman and he hailed from N. Mark. The issue of this warrant makes the protection of the court of no avail, and Hatch can be taken wherever found. However, Hatch has for the time eluded his pursuers, for he left the city four hours before Dr. Lewis returned.]

The County Fair.

The attraction at the opera house this evening will no doubt prove to be one of the best we have had this season.—An exchange says: "The County Fair" is an idyllic creation which has neither boldness of conception nor remarkable merit in its construction. It has, however, the charm of simplicity and the advantage of being easy to perform. The horse scene is a piece of mechanical ingenuity that is immensely entertaining, but it does not as the public might think, constitute the one essential element of the performance. Even if it were omitted the play would be entertaining. It is a small thing done completely. Nothing is overlooked. It is all so simple that there is no excuse for overlooking anything. There are no tremendous explosions of dramatic fury, no thrilling climaxes that are in danger of being grotesque if not carefully done. The duty of each performer is plain. It is like one of those pictures in which the artist hangs a violin on a board wall, hammers a rusty nail or two near it and proceeds to make a patient and accurate copy of the whole. The result is almost invariably hailed with approval by the public. It is proof of the adage that a little done well is better than a great deal poorly attempted. The members of the company are delightfully realistic; there is nothing artificial in their performance; they do not appear to be acting a part; they seem the character they assume. The stage setting is picturesque and truthful, and charms by being just what we have noticed a hundred times on some old country farm.

Not Notorious.

Jules Garrison and his wife, the couple wanted in Denver for obtaining money under false pretenses, spent yesterday in the council room in the city hall, where Jules divested himself of his congress gaiters, reposed comfortably in an arm chair and with Mrs. Jules opposite, the pair enjoyed themselves by watching the sights of the street.

Mr. Garrison wished it to be known that he and his wife are not notorious as stated in yesterday's Gazette. It is true, he says, that they were arrested in Denver some days ago, and were identified in that city's jail. It is also true that the pair are very seriously wanted by H. B. Reynolds, the proprietor of one of Denver's variety theatres because of taking, according to Mr. Reynolds, money to the amount of $15 from him, stating that they would work the money out at the theatre.

Garrison changed his mind about remaining with Reynolds, however, and departed for Aspen, where he and his wife have an engagement at Moore's theatre.

Garrison is the author of a number of tragic plays among which are "The Convict's Oath" and "Jack the Ripper."

He has great hopes that he will come out of his latest scrape all right, as he believes Reynolds will accept a note from him on the Aspen theatre sufficient to cover the amount owed him.

The Denver officer arrived in this city yesterday afternoon, and will take the Garrisons to Denver this morning.

Mr. Tim Hussy, an old-time prospector and formerly assistant geologist for Wyoming, will go up to the Cripple creek mining district to-day. Mr. Hussey is ready to make reports for persons owning mining claims in that district.

G. A. R.—ATTENTION!

It is a long time yet before you will have your knapsacks packed for the Grand Encampment to be held at Detroit, Mich., but some of you are even now inquiring as to the best route.

If you will ask any ticket agent or hotel clerk for a folder containing a map of the Great Wabash route and will examine that map, you will see that this line offers advantages unequalled. For instance you can go from either Kansas City or Council Bluffs, by way of St. Louis and Chicago, or Toledo, or via the direct air line straight to Detroit without change of cars.

Our Watchword.

The [illegible] to advertise Will [illegible] patronize. Or, [illegible] it time [illegible] and be [illegible].

"The County Fair" at the opera house this evening.

Mr. Henry Le B. Wills returned from his California trip yesterday.

Pike's Peak commandery No. 6 will meet for rehearsal Wednesday evening at 7:30.

Two drunks from Manitou were fined $5 and costs each in yesterday morning's police court.

The costumes of the girl's brand brigade at the college are to be gray, with black trimmings.

Mr. J. Bischoff was called to Edina, Mo., by a telegram yesterday announcing the serious illness of his father.

Col. W. T. Holt, an old-time resident of Colorado Springs and an extensive owner of land east of the city, is a late arrival at the Antlers.

Colburn & Dudley have appealed the case of Ed Kelly, the Manitou Junction murderer and now confined in the penitentiary, to the supreme court.

An unusual spectacle was witnessed on the streets yesterday, that of three prairie schooners drawn by ox teams. One of the wagons was marked "Synod for Oregon."

Mr. John Meadows, of St. Joe, Mo., who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Charles Magnum, on East Pike's Peak avenue, for some time, left for home yesterday morning.

Mr. I. R. Robbins, a student who has been at the college for some time, left last night for his home at Longmont. Mr. Robbins does not expect to return to the college next year.

On Thursday evening, at 7:30 o'clock the Pike's Peak commandery No. 6, K. T., will meet and confer the order of the Temple. All visiting sir knights are cordially requested to be present.

Les Dolan, the man who killed A. P. Crose at Manitou a short time ago, had his preliminary examination postponed yesterday to the 8th of this month as the prosecuting attorneys are now absent.

A large attendance witnessed the drill of the college cadets for the Hayes medal yesterday. Smith became the winner of the medal which he has now won twice. Watson is the only other cadet who has twice won the medal, and he and Smith will drill for the prize next Friday.

W. J. Gilmore's spectacle "The Twelve Temptations" will appear at the opera house Monday evening. The company gave the piece at the Tabor Grand, Denver, Monday evening to a crowded house. The press of that city are in high praise of the company and their performance.

Those desiring to attend the graduation exercises of the High school at the opera house on the evening of June 5 may obtain tickets for reserved seats without charge by applying on Thursday, June 4, at the Midland ticket office. Seats not claimed on Friday evening by 8 o'clock will be forfeited.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Sprague will be grieved to hear that their young daughter, aged 18 months, died yesterday evening at 10:30, of diphtheria. The child was sick but 24 hours. The funeral will take place from the residence, 105 South Nevada avenue, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Charles Cant arrived at home yesterday morning from California, where he has been for several weeks, bringing his bride. Mr. Cant was married to Miss Anna F. Knox, at Los Angeles, Cal., last Saturday. Mrs. Knox is a former resident of this city and the young couple are receiving the congratulations of friends.

Mr. Van F. Rose and Miss Edith Corbin were married at Fountain last evening at the home of the bride's father, Mr. M. R. Corbin. A reception at the Mitchell house followed and was largely attended by the many friends of the young people. Mr. Rose has taught the school at Fountain for several years, but it is said will now become a resident of this city and engage in business.

Arrangements have been made with James H. Van Gelder, A. M., of Catskill, N. Y., to deliver an illustrated lecture at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. on Friday evening, June 5th. The lecture will be illustrated by more than 100 beautiful stereopticon views, shown in the highest style of art with a powerful calcium light. The entertainment will be free to members of the association. A small admission fee will be charged the public, who are cordially invited to attend.

All who enjoyed Professor Ragan's lecture entitled "Rambling's in Rome" should not fail to attend the lecture on "Vesuvius and Pompeii" at the First M. E. church Tuesday evening, June 9. The stereopticon views to be used on that occasion are very beautiful and rare, many indeed being almost unobtainable in this country or abroad. Rev. Warner is a very interesting and agreeable speaker and his account of an ascent to Mt. Vesuvius and description of the crater of to-day will be thrilling as well as instructive.

The Sisters' Fair.

Yesterday was the second day of the hospital fair. Many more people gathered there than on the preceding evening, and many more people mingled in the dancing. The music and the dance seemed livelier, the booths brighter, the people happier, more flowers bedecked the dress of the pretty girls, more cake and refreshments disappeared amid the ravages of the hungry, and in fact there was more of everything to contribute toward the general enjoyment.

There were plenty of flowers on sale. The donations were on exhibition and some of them were worth seeing. The enterprising ladies who are assisting in the work were very energetic in their efforts to sell votes for the contestants, and quite a large number of the votes were sold.

At between 9 and 10 o'clock the musicians arrived and the piano and fiddle called the dancers to the floor.

There should be a large attendance each evening, not only to assist the sisters but for the sake of the enjoyment.

The Brown building, owned by [illegible] at the northeast corner of Second and Walnut streets, Cincinnati, suffered a loss of $18,000 to $20,000 by fire last night, on which there is an insurance of $7,000.

At Clifton, N. H., fire in the Parker & Young manufacturing company's saw mill caused a loss of $100,000. The building was a mass of flames. Dwelling houses adjacent soon followed and the whole village seemed threatened. Total loss $100,000.

Schweinfurth Ordered Out of Town.

Kansas City, June 2.—A committee of twelve citizens held a meeting to-day and decided that Schweinfurth, the alleged Christ, was a blasphemous impostor. A communication was sent to him at the "heaven" that he must leave the city at once or submit to a coat of tar and feathers. One of the "angels" conveyed the "unholy communication" to him in the appropriate regions of the "heaven." Schweinfurth declined to take any notice of the warning but called on the mayor for protection.

Travelers Protective Association.

Little Rock, Ark., June 2.—The national convention of the Travelers Protective association was called to order this morning by President C. J. Banks, of the Arkansas division, at the Capital theatre. After Governor Eagle had welcomed the delegates, President McGraw delivered the annual address, which showed the organization to be in a healthy financial condition.

Real estate men claim that the market is dull just now, but on footing up the sales of the month now closing they are surprised to find that they equal in amount the business of any month of last year, although not quite so many in number. Sales are mostly on Main and Eighth streets, and are mostly valuable business property. A lot on Eighth street, 50x100 feet, which was simply worth the bonus in property two years ago, and was offered at $[illegible] after a month's ago, sold in May of last year for $[illegible], and was resold this month for $11,000. The buyer will [illegible] in building on this lot, and will net more than 10 per cent. interest on his money. This is the [illegible] building year, and values are [illegible] will surely equalize [illegible] be far healthier next year. Men of means, for rising judge, are now [illegible] and a very [illegible] place. It is going to bring the [illegible] kind of returns. The electric motor railway line is now being actively located, and is a valuable pointer for investors.
